A few workers turned out to be thousands of balloons with makeshift equipment. On May 27, 1916, the company was incorporated by Harry Gill Sr. and Harry Polley. As the business grew, a three-storey building with 18,000 square feet was built. The company gave birth to an industry that led to Ashland, Ohio, became the balloon capital of the world. By 1923, rubber balls and mushroom rubber balls were added to the production line. In 1929, the business was sold to Kenton R. Cravens and John Sweeney. Gill later continued to launch the National Latex Company. By 1940, the company had expanded to three buildings more than 60,000 square feet high. Then came World War II and the business was transformed from the toy manufacturer toy manufacturer manufacturer of military equipment. Eagle produced stuffed life jackets, Mae West jackets and stuffed boarding boats, grocery bags, delicious bags, instrument cases and ponchos. In 1945, the company was divided into production with new vinyl materials that were more expensive than rubber. In 1951, Richard Long was named president, and Bob Tipton, Bob Castor and Len Rauth began their long and distinguished careers at the company. Kent Sporting Goods of New London was founded as a subsidiary of Eagle Rubber Co. in 1957. This company continued to expand and other companies were purchased across the United States. In 1971, the Brown Group of St. Louis acquired Eagle and Kent Sporting Goods and increased the necessary capital to build a $2 million computer storage facility. Another subsidiary, Vittet Sports in St. Louis, was acquired. In 1976, Eagle was the world's largest producer of mushroom rubber, blow-forming and vinyl game balls and offered the most complete line in its industry. In 1981, the Eagle facility on Orange Street went about its business under the name Hedstrom Corporation, which was founded in 1915 as a bicycle manufacturer. The company declared bankruptcy in 2004 and closed its production before former employees and investors bought the company. Local investors bought Hedstrom's local property and name with a new company, Ball, Bounce & Sport Inc. The new plant opened at the former Ashland Square Plaza on Baney Road in October 2010. BB&amp;S's Hedstrom Entertainment Division manufactures game balls and other toys in Asia for the U.S. and Canadian markets, and at Hedstrom Plastics' rotomolding facility in the former Walmart building manufactures vinyl and polyethylene etching and recreational equipment, plastic parts and other products for consumer and industrial product vendors.
